National Capital Region Trail Count Program
The Washington, DC region has 150 trail counters (with more on the way), one of the largest regional count programs in the country.

Photo by Dani Moore

Data from 83 counters uploaded and viewable in our Dashboard (https://bikeped.trec.pdx.edu/).

Uniting data from 4 agencies: Arlington County, City of Alexandria, National Park Service, District Dept. of Transportation

6 students assisted with the project, as well as an additional 11 students from a graduate-level studio class at Virginia Tech.

34 stakeholders from 15 different agencies and organizations attended 4 quarterly meetings.

Photo by Dani Moore

Made possible by a partnership between the National Park Service, District Department of Transportation, University of North Carolina, Virginia Tech, and Portland State University, the Trail Count Program is creating the most comprehensive portrait of trail use the Washington, DC region has ever had. This document highlights key project outcomes as of December 31, 2022.