

National Capital Region Trail Count Program

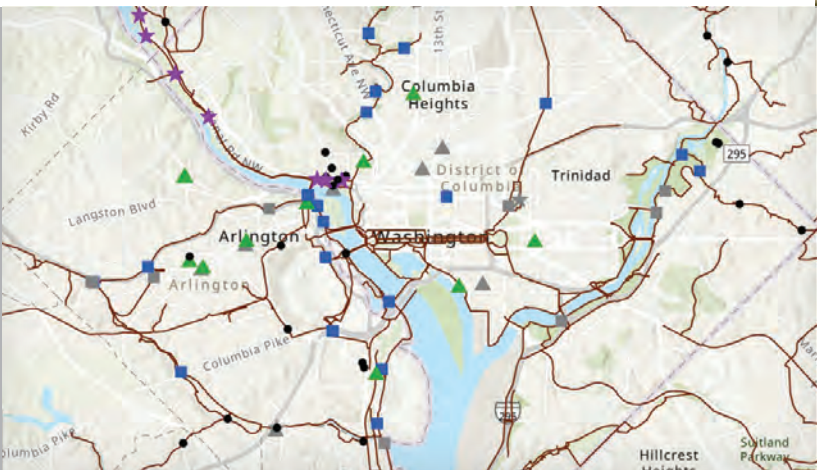

December 2023 Update

The Washington, DC region has 160 trail counters (with more on the way), one of the largest regional count programs in the country.

Photo by Dani Moore

Data from 90 counters uploaded and viewable in our Dashboard (<https://bikeped.trec.pdx.edu/>).

Uniting data from 4 agencies: Arlington County, City of Alexandria, National Park Service, District Department of Transportation

10 students assisted with the project, as well as an additional 8 students from a Computer Science capstone group at Portland State University

60 stakeholders from 24 different agencies and organizations attended 4 regional meetings.

Photo by Dani Moore

Made possible by a partnership between the National Park Service, District Department of Transportation, University of North Carolina, Virginia Tech, and Portland State University, the Trail Count Program is creating the most comprehensive portrait of trail use the Washington, DC region has ever had. This document highlights key project outcomes as of December 31, 2023.